Join McKillop Library in sponsoring a campus-wide conversation about censorship and intellectual freedom!

Banned Books Teach-Out
At McKillop Library

McKillop Library offers to host your classes at the library to engage in open discussions about intellectual freedom and censorship related to issues covered in your classes. Every discipline on campus can point to an issue of censorship or intellectual freedom that is significant to your field. We would like you to identify one of these issues, devote a class to it, and invite others to participate.

If you volunteer, we will put together schedule of topics which will be publicized campus-wide so that others can join you and your students in these conversations. If you can join in the discussion, please email dawn.emsellem@salve.edu by the first week of classes in September so that we can put you on the schedule!

Questions? Please contact Donna Harrington-Lueker at harringd@salve.edu, Dawn Emsellem at dawn.emsellem@salve.edu, or Kiki Butler at kristin.butler@salve.edu.
